When you switch printers, the new one will reformat a document (why, I don't know. It's really irritating!) As a result, some copies lost the last line of the Quick Quiz on page 2. It should read:

12. There are two parts of the body that can't heal themselves—True or False?

The Code Word puzzle intro should read: Each number in the grid below always stands for the same letter—e.g. 25 is always B. Can you complete the puzzle? Also there should be no "U" in the 3 box. The U is correct in 21.

A forgotten revival 100 years on!

Lowestoft is my home town, writes John Woods. It is famous for being the most easterly point in Great Britain. On Monday 7 March 1921, Lowestoft began to experience what has been called the last spiritual revival in England.

Why remember an event on the edge of the UK from 100 years ago? Mike Betts, a Christian leader who lives in Lowestoft, suggests three reasons:

- Looking at history helps us reflect on our present situation with a view to moving forward prayerfully into the future.
- God delights to work in obscure people and places. As Nathaniel said so famously about Jesus: "Can anything good come out of Nazareth?" God often uses nobodies. People like Gideon, and the 12 disciples, or in Lowestoft, with a fascinating combination of trained and untrained preachers.
- The events in 1921 came on the heels of the worldwide Spanish Flu pandemic, caught by 500 million people, of whom at least 50 million died, and itself following the devastation of the Great War, in which a further 40 million died, and the port of Lowestoft was heavily bombed. This created an atmosphere of anxiety and a thirst for God's deliverance and something better.

Douglas Brown (pictured), a pastor from London, arrived in Lowestoft as a reluctant mission preacher. He had been in bed for 11 days with the flu that had taken those millions of people worldwide, and had just emerged from months of spiritual crisis, wrestling with God until he had a powerful experience of his love and power. The visit was the result of a period of concentrated prayer by many of the local churches.

When I (John Woods) was a pastor in Lowestoft, a man called Hector Griffin was part of the congregation. Hector had become a Christian in 1921, and he told me about hearing Douglas Brown preach. Brown would walk along the aisles of the church while he was preaching and praying, pausing occasionally by a pew.

On that evening he stood near Hector, saying: "The Son of Man has come to seek and to save that which was lost." Hector said that he knew he was lost and was so overcome by the sense of God's presence through the preaching that he became a Christian in that moment. His wife to be was a faithful praying Christian. Her prayers were answered that night.

Their only child, Stanley, was the main leader at the church where I became a Christian. Stanley wrote an account of the events of 1921 (The Forgotten Revival, published by Day One). You can read an excerpt at <https://ukwells.org/revivalists/1921-fishermans-revival>

It was marked by dramatic conversions, including local fishermen whose cynicism was melted by an authentic encounter with God. There was a tangible sense of God's presence in the town, with people breaking down in repentance in the street, and people even being saved while out at sea.

Later in the year, during the herring season, the work continued among visiting fishermen and fisherwomen who had come south from Scotland. This led to the spread of the awakening to the north east coast of Scotland and beyond. Ripples were also felt throughout East Anglia and Northern Ireland.

Douglas Brown was invited to speak at the Keswick Convention in May 1922, where there was further evidence of God being at work.

After 1921, Lowestoft sent many people to train for Christian ministry and missionary work, including Alan Neech, who became a bishop in India, and later a Chairman of the Keswick Convention.

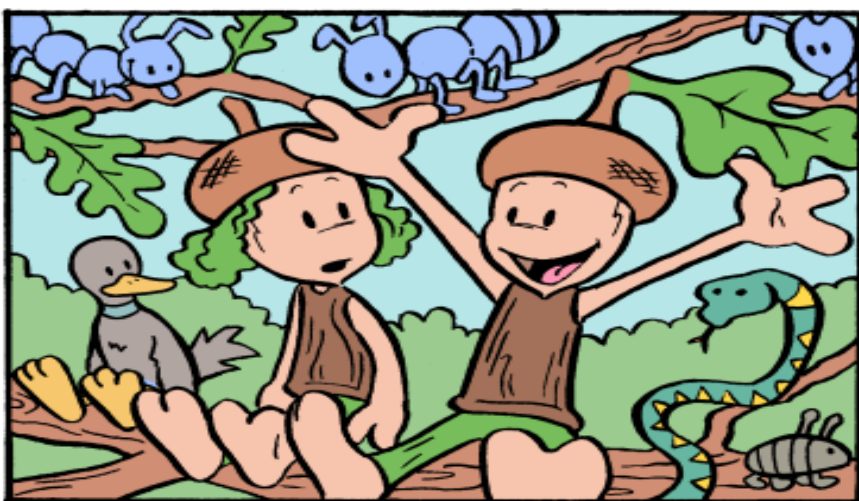

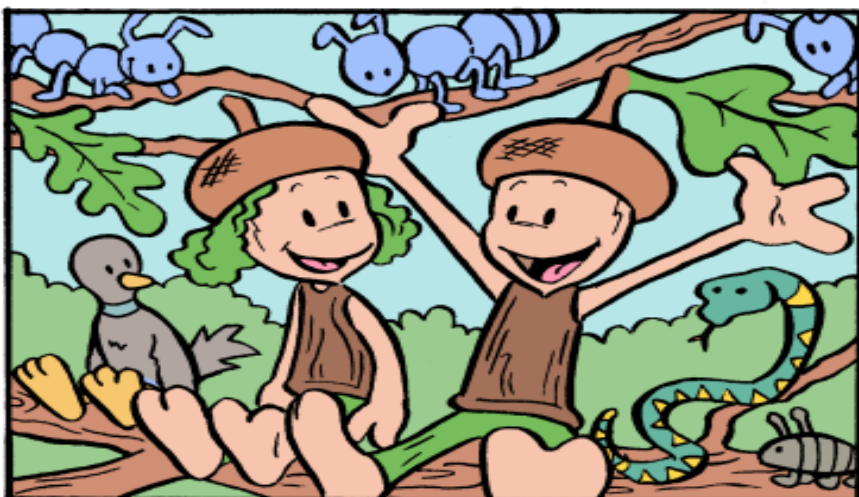

A young curate in Suffolk, who experienced the impact of the revival, shared the passion with his son David Pytches (now 91), who was to become a bishop in Chile where he saw God move in power. Later as Vicar of St Andrew's Chorleywood, he became the catalyst for Soul Survivor and New Wine, and shaped the thinking of the leaders of HTB, the home of the Alpha Course.

Something remarkable happened in Lowestoft, just over 100 years ago. Living as we do, as they did, in the shadow of a global pandemic, let us pray that God might work with awakening power again.
